The Harper's Ferry Quartette gave excellent concerts at the Congregational church, Monday and Tuesday evenings. They have the rich-toned voice of the negro, well trained, and sing with much expression. Prof. Thompson is probably the best bass singer who has been in Norway for a long time. His voice is powerful, smooth and flexible and he seems to just open his mouth and let the music roll out.

More than a year ago when everybody seemed in despair "as to what we should do with our tramps," the ADVERTISER advocated the idea that they should be made to improve our highways under competent management, thus making two good and useful things out of our now two b d ones,—roads and tramps. The ADVERTISER is pleased to notice that the press in different parts of the country is now agitating the practicability of having the vast army of tramps who apply for aid make themselves in a measure self supporting by labor on the highways. It is even thought if the supply of tramps should "hold out" every highway and byway in the United States might in not such a very long space of time be macadamized.

Passers by on upper Main Street were startled, last Friday afternoon, by the sudden death of J. F. Herrick of Noble's Corner, commonly known as Frank Herrick. He had been down street, where he met collector Lord and paid some tax. He complained of a pain in his stomach and said he must get home, so started up street. When near the store of S. Harriman & Co. he collapsed and fell in a heap on the sidewalk. Passers by rushed to his assistance, lifted him up, chafed wrists and temples, but could find no sign of life. They carried him into Harriman's store, and a physician who had been summoned soon arrived and pronounced life extinct. The funeral was held at his residence, Monday, Pastor J. A. Harding of the Baptist church officiating. A brief account of Mr. Herrick's life is as follows: Joseph Franklin Herrick was born in Greenwood, Aug. 1, 1829. When still a child, he came to Norway and ever after resided in this town. In 1858 he married Francina J. Penley, who died in 1882. Two sons live in Massachusetts, a daughter, Mrs. Guy Curtis, in Greenwood, and their other daughter, Addie May, had kept house for her father, since her mother's death. Mr. Herrick was one of our most respected citizens, and leaves a host of friends.

Frank Austin Stearns, who has been chosen captain for '96 of Bowdoin's football eleven, was born in Quincy, Florida, April 13, 1876, his parents, both of whom are now dead, being Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Stearns of Lovell, who resided in Florida for many years. His uncle, M. L. Stearns, was at one time Governor of Florida. Young Stearns lived in Florida until five years ago, since which time Norway has been his home. He fitted for Bowdoin at Bridgton Academy, where he took a prominent part in athletics, although he never played football before coming to college. He was a member of his class eleven, freshman and sophomore years, and the latter year played end on the second eleven. This year he was left end on the 'Varsity eleven, and did brilliant work in each of the eight games of the season. He is a hard player, a sure tackle, and never gets hurt. His weight is 175 pounds and he stands about 5 feet, 11 inches. Stearns has also made a mark as a bicycle rider, and during last season won races at Bath, Rockland, Norway, Sanford and Lewiston. At the State Fair he won the half mile race in 1.11, breaking the Maine competition record for that distance. He will keep up bicycle racing this spring and summer, and is sure of more honors in this line. He was counted on to win the Maine intercollegiate field day race at Waterville, last June, but a punctured tire at the start threw him out of the race. Mr. Stearns has just returned to college from a term of teaching. He is a good scholar and is much liked by all. His college fraternity is the Theta Delta Chi.—[Argus.

An Elaborate Production.

There will undoubtedly be a large audience present to witness the appearance here of E. A. Mitchell's High-class Production of "The Vendetta" at Norway Opera House. "The Vendetta" as produced this year is not only one of the strongest but likewise one of the most expensive attractions on the road. The scenery and costumes are new and costly, and the company is composed of artists of recognized ability and reputation. The scene at Monte Carlo, the out-break in the prison at Toulon, the collision at sea with the electric search light effects are some of the many scenic wonders that will be given.

BRYANT'S POND.

The drama, "A Fisherman's Luck," which the West Paris people presented here, last week, was pronounced by many to be the best play ever presented in Grange Hall by local talent. All the parts were well played but Margie McKenney as "Little Nellie" took the audience by storm. The ladies' orchestra gave the audience some fine music, besides being a novelty to them. Altogether the play deserved a larger audience.

The studding is double ironed and the sills are of iron. Strong, light, comfortable, commodious and handsome, all describe it. It was for his own use, and we wondered how many could afford so nice a one.

It is due to our esteemed friend, George Wise, the marble and granite worker, to state that he is not father to the boy whose birth was recently published in the ADVERTISER. There is another George Wise in this village, and his family is the one that has increased. The selectmen gave a hearing, Wednesday forenoon, on the matter of laying out a road from Sylvan Shurtleff's mansion back along the ridge, and expressed themselves in favor of doing it. Now, the one thing needful in more highways is direct access to the county buildings for parties from Norway and beyond. The coming season will probable see such a road built.

We were talking about school matters with J. A. Lambe. He has been the Paris supervisor during the past year and is intimately acquainted with the situation in this town. He says that the money which is expended for supervision and high schools in this town and Norway could be made to do more work. His idea would be to have one large high school for both towns, and make it a rousing good one. And also hire a competent man for superintendent, whose whole time would be devoted to that work in both towns. The ADVERTISER would like opinions from people interested in this subject.

Byron Tuttle the well-known Andover stage driver was here, Monday.

A certain South Paris man tells us that his two sons are noisy. The boys are 14 and 16 years old and sleep together. Being evenly matched for strength and agility, and each anxious to be superior, they have lively times in their own room. Their father provided them with suitable furniture for rough usage and told them to "go it." They have obeyed, and without violating the rules against destroying things and fighting. But the rest of the household would think there was nothing unusual happening if an earthquake came in the middle of the night. The indulgent father solemnly avers that he was quiet and peaceable, in bed and out, when a boy, and hints that his sons' noisiness is inherited from their mother. Perhaps it is, but we wouldn't wonder if that man is a past master in the art of making good explanations.

George Libby has sold his farm to a Mr. Fuller of Oxford. The purchaser's son-in-law, Mr. Spofford of this village, will occupy it. We understand that Mr. Libby will move into South Paris.

A New England Winter.

There is no prettier sight in nature than the snow covered trees, tall, majestic, old pines, the slender maples, the quivering poplars, the short, shrubby spruces, all robed in a mantle of white, sparkling, glittering and twinkling in the sun, clear as crystal. Surely there is nothing to be compared for whiteness with snow. And then what better sport is there than to watch the squirrels leaping and frolicking among the branches, tumbling and tossing the snow about in merry sport.

We read with wonder and surprise of the bright, tropical winters in Florida and California, and when the thermometer goes down, down below zero, the sun hides his smiling face behind the dark clouds and seems to frown, and the wind howls down the chimney, whistles about the corners, and shrieks wildly among the trees, then we wish we had "the wings of a bird" and could fly with them to some sunnier clime.

A New England winter cannot be enjoyed to its fullest extent unless one lives in the country. There are pleasures and duties innumerable. For example, the farmer boy has a chance to enjoy the winter to its fullest extent. What fun he has building snow forts and towers by piling large masses of snow one above the other, behind which he stands with his playmates and nobly defends it with a spirit that becomes our brave New England boys, and as though something more depended upon the keeping of the fort, or perhaps the taking of the opponent's fort than the mere "seeing who will beat."

There is no capitulating among boys who are defending a snow fort, it is an "unconditional surrender" on one side with a demolished fort, while the "colors" are flying triumphantly over the other. The "colors" usually consist of an old brown stick with an old red scarf of the captain's or one of the other boys tied about the top with the whole stuck on top of the fort.

For the protection of these colors the boys fight to defend them with the same ardent spirit that the "Boys in Blue" fought for the glorious "Stars and Stripes." But the beaten side is not to be despised. They fought with the same valor but for some reason must give up. After entering into the fray with the same courage and fortitude, with the same desire, namely "to beat," to have to surrender just on account of bad luck, (if there is such a thing) or overpowering strength on the other side, without the victory to encourage them, they have only the most discouraging and disheartening of words, failed.

But the New England winter, what can equal it? Its bright frosty mornings? Its beautiful sunny days? Its clear moonlight nights? Nothing, no nothing; not even the sunny South with its millions of gorgeously painted flowers; not even the grand, noble West with its fields of waving grain; not even merry France with her roses and vineyards; not even Italy whose singular clearness of atmosphere reveals its gigantic mountains and picturesque villages at wonderful distances, to many enthusiastic travelers; no not even Switzerland with her snow capped mountains stretching far into the sky like the white fingers of an angel pointing up to God.

SWEET SWAIN

TRY SOME AT YOUR GROCERS

[Copyright, 1895, by Frederick A. Stokes Company.]

"Besides, Gabriel's sure to look in just to see how that rather smartish girl of his is getting on, on his way to the Hat, and then we can nab him and the liquor too. Savey?"

The sergeant looked at his superior with not a little ill concealed disgust upon his face as he replied:

"But excuse me, sir; he's not likely to fetch the liquor there, and you forget that there are only two women left at St. Denis', and in a small place like that there's hardly room for us. I don't see that we have any right to take possession of a man's house because he happens to be away, even although he is suspected of smuggling—more especially when he has only left two defenseless women to protect it. Of course, if you intend going into some outhouse, it won't matter so much."

"Outhouse be d——d!" exclaimed Jamie impatiently and with a look of superior wisdom. "I say, Yorke, you've got to see a little more of life and the world yet before you can get along in this country."

A wise man, if he has not traveled, is as worthy of respect as the thoughtful man who has, in that he realizes his own littleness and paves the way to knowledge. But a fool is like a fat donkey that ventures upon thin ice; he courts extinction by the weight of his own ignorance.

The sergeant had turned quickly when Jamie spoke and looked full in the face of his superior officer with not a little surprise, then considerable amusement. As he went slowly on without making any reply, a pitying smile crossed his features as he ejaculated under his breath, "Poor devil!"

"Harry," said the private to his older comrade, the sergeant, as the scout and Jamie headed down the coulee, and with a look of mock gravity on his face, "don't you wish you had seen as much life as the Amiable One?"

"Come, now," answered the sergeant, "none of your treasonable remarks; let's talk of something else. By Jove, though, I can't help wishing that old fool St. Denis had staid at home! If it weren't for that poor girl of his I'd say serves him right to get caught—and ten chances to one we'll nab him this time. It's a shame of him to ruin her life like this—and she is such a superior sort of girl. I think her mother must have been a decided cut above the common run of them, though old Gabriel's not such an unpresentable looking old fellow himself. And by the way, Dick, I don't suppose you've seen her yet. It won't do, you know, to get soft upon her."

"Ah! I see. Soft yourself, eh?" said Dick disrespectfully.

"Well, not quite," was the answer, in a tone that did not exactly reassure the youngster and still less invited further discussion of the subject.

CHAPTER III.

She stood outside the house bareheaded and looked toward the sky, while her hands were outstretched in front of her, palms upward. The light breeze caught up the silky wealth of gleaming hair that had escaped from its heavy folds for the time being, until it streamed in midair behind her like a shimmering shaft of golden light. It kissed and heightened the delicate color on her cheek. And the feathery flakes of snow melted away as they fell upon her firm white palms. Even if they had been animate things, perhaps, they would have been quite content to pass away there. There was a look of concern upon Marie St. Denis' face as she looked all around before going into the house again.

"Jeannette," she said to an elderly and tidy looking French half breed woman, "I believe we are going to have a storm. Oh, I hope dad is in some safe place! It makes me ill to think of him being on the prairie and perhaps a bad blizzard coming on."

"He'll be all right, ma cherie; fret not yourself," said old Jeannette cheerily. But she said under her breath all the same, "And serve him right for going, the wicked man!"

It was a long, low room and scrupulously clean. To use a rather absurd but popular saying, "you might have eaten your dinner off the floor" (just as if there was any necessity for any one to perpetrate such an inconvenient and barbarous deed!), so beautifully clean and fresh it was. There were some humble and not successful attempts at adornment in this room. For into each of the windows were fitted little boxes, in which still bloomed some hardy plants. There was an absence of all cheap or gaudy ornamentation, which is so often found in the houses of those whose love of show is paramount to their love of the beautiful. But there were some unique and not unbeautiful specimens of wrought Indian beadwork hung against the wall that made one think of the time when interiors were hung with tapestry.

One end of the room was sacred to the burnished and well kept culinary articles of Jeannette. Here and there against the walls, mounted fan shape, were white owls, with their feathers like great ruffles surrounding their beautiful heads, and eagle hawks fierce and picturesque, mounted in a like fashion. They were a species of ornamentation that any dressing room in Belgravia might have been proud of.

Unconsciously in keeping with a prevailing fashion stood a small triangular glass fronted cupboard, with some wonderful old china in it, in one corner of the room. That china had belonged to the girl's mother and grandmother and was a sacred thing. There were a pair of brass mounted, flintlock pistols, crossed over a quaint, narrow and high mirror, and beautiful stone Indian tomahawks and pipes, whose helves and stems were a rich mosaic of colored beads and from which dangled eagles' feathers. Crossed over this doorway was a pair of snowshoes, and over that one, in the center, was a magnificent elk's head whose antlers touched the ceiling. And there were two tiny models of birch bark canoes, and Indian rowers in them with paddles poised in the air. On a small table at the far end of the room there was a unique grasslike woven cloth that was made beautiful and striking by having a fantastic pattern wrought on it in colored stars and beads, and heavily fringed. The yellow and red colors which the Crees affect predominate in it. Strange it is to think—and few there are perhaps who know it—that the Crees got these colors from the Mexicans, when the former were a bold and warlike race—when their territory lay far to the south, and ere they were driven gradually backward by younger and stronger races. Though there was a certain air of barbaric splendor about that cloth, still the effect of the whole room was in keeping with and characteristic of those romantic and picturesque elements of a past now vanishing before a more prosaic nineteenth century utilitarianism. There was indeed really good taste displayed in the arrangement of every detail in that room. Not even the conventional cooking and box stove and lengths of piping could detract from the quaintness of that old world interior, for they were blackened and polished till they reflected one's image like a mirror.

Then the girl put an iron on the stove and looked at a little heap of collars and cuffs which lay upon the dress or ready to be operated upon.

"Sit down, Jeannette," she said, "and tell me a story while I iron these things—something about the old French voyagers, or about the early days of Fort Garry before Riel came to make the metis dissatisfied."

Just at this moment a great wiry haired dog, something between a Scotch staghound and a sheep dog, lifted its head and growled ominously. It had been lying half asleep in front of the stove. The girl started significantly and placed one finger against her lower lip. The half breed woman put her head on one side and listened intently. Then they heard the dull, uneven thud of horses' feet, and dark shadows, as it were, passed and momentarily darkened the front windows. In another minute there was a loud, irregular knocking at the door. Then it was thrown open, and a great fur clad figure stumbled into the room, powdered with snow.

"What a devil of a day!" it exclaimed.

It is perhaps unnecessary to say this was the gentleman already referred to who had the honor of bearing her majesty's commission.

In another second another figure entered, but it came no farther than the door, and closed it so as to shut out the drifting snow. This figure was the sergeant, who did not speak, but indeed seemed somewhat embarrassed.

The girl stood as if transfixed with astonishment at this sudden entry, or as if these uninvited guests hailed from another world instead of being only matter of fact mounted policemen. But surely it was something more than mere astonishment that paled her cheek and for a second made her lean against the dresser as if for support. Who can tell what thoughts passed through that poor girl's mind just then? It was not difficult to speculate upon one all powerful vision that rose before her, and that was her father. Into her expressive, wide open eyes there came a look of startled apprehension, and then the consciousness of some dreaded presence, which was pitiful to look upon in one so young. But the gallant leader of the party called back the color into her cheeks.

The inspector was a married man, but he possessed a way with him which he considered was all potent with the fair sex. Perhaps it had been potent to a certain extent—in that sphere which he adorned.

"Now then, Mary Ann," he said, "you don't look as if you were glad to see me, as I know you are. Just get a rustle on, like a dear, and shove another log into that stove and—damn it, take that big, ugly brute away, for goodness sake!"

The great hound was growling and sniffing in a suspicious fashion in the neighborhood of the officer's ankles, occasioning that gentleman no little concern.

"Sh-h—get away, Michelle! Lie down, sirre!" cried Jeannette, catching up a billet of wood and chasing the hound from the visitors, much to Jamie's satisfaction.

And now the claim of stranger to the rites of hospitality had dawned upon the startled girl, and as if she had not heard the officer's free and easy speech she said:

"Won't you sit down? You must be cold." And she placed chairs for them near the stove and was handling a fresh log to put in the box stove when the sergeant came quickly toward her.

"Allow me, Miss St. Denis," he said.

At the same moment he had drawn off his mitts and seized the log of wood she had lifted in both hands. In doing this his hand accidentally touched hers. She looked up at him suddenly and the color on her cheek deepened not a little. "How cold your hands are!" she remarked. "Their touch quite startled me; they are like lead." But she let him take the log, and perhaps he did not know that this simple, commonplace act of politeness, which with some would have passed as a matter of course, was recognized gratefully by her as a deference she felt was only her due, even if she were only Gabriel St. Denis' daughter.

"Have you put your horses in the stable?" Marie asked, turning to the sergeant. "There are four or five spare stalls, you know, and lots of hay."

It was significant that she did not address herself to the officer. But Jamie was not disposed to show this untutored child of the prairie that he was in command of the party.

"Don't fret, my dear," he remarked, with an assumption of graceful facetiousness; "my men know how to make themselves at home. You press the button—I mean, you find the hay, and we do the rest."

Marie looked at him wonderingly for an instant. She did not know whether to put this man's strange speech down to his ignorance of the common civilities of everyday life or to a chronic crudeness or rudeness of manner. She only slightly bit her lip and made no comment. She would be charitable and ascribe his familiarity to the former hypothesis. It would not do to neglect the sacred rites of hospitality, even if—and here her heart sank within her at the thought.

In another minute the private and the scout had come into the room. At last Jamie asked abruptly:

"When do you expect the old man back?"

The sergeant turned uneasily in his chair when he saw the look of wistful entreaty and pain upon the girl's face on hearing this blunt question.

"If you mean my father," she answered, "I am not in a position to tell you. Do you wish particularly to see him?"

"Yup—yaas, I just reckon we want to—to have an opportunity of interviewing him," answered Jamie in his happiest manner. He was under the impression that his humor was of a light and graceful kind, and he looked into the faces of the others to mark the signs of appreciation of these qualities. But he was nettled at discovering only a stolid imperturbability in them. Had his perceptive faculties not been so dulled by conceit he might possibly have detected a look of unqualified disgust and shame there instead.

"Now, look here, my dear," he continued, "it's no use of you tryin this innocent sort of dodge on with me. We want to see the old man, and I guess we'll see him, s'posin we've got to wait in this 'ere house for a fortnight"——

"Sir!" interrupted the girl suddenly, and turning her great clear eyes full upon him, with almost an incredulous look in them.

The sergeant coughed and shifted uneasily in his seat. The constable kicked the heel of the scout surreptitiously with his outstretched foot, and the latter seemed to find something that interested him immensely in a pair of snowshoes which were crossed on the wall over the dresser. The half breed woman paused in the performance of some work, folded her arms, and looked at the officer with brows that knitted like gathering storms. But Jamie saw none of these signs and continued:

"You don't seem to understand, my dear; a pretty girl like you"——

But he had overstepped the mark this time. The warm blood mounted into the girl's face; she held her head erect and looked at him unflinchingly as she interrupted:

Feb. 14—Hon. Edward G. Swett's lecture on "Picturesque Maine," Norway Opera House.

Advertising for Farmers.

While waiting at a country station I became acquainted with quite an intelligent, nicely dressed gentleman who belonged to that class which, according to the funny newspaper, is the natural mark for the confidence man. During our conversation he learned that I was connected with the advertising department of the press.

"I believe in advertising," he remarked, "and practice it, as also do several of my neighbors."

The possibility of a farmer advertising had never occurred to me, and upon expressing a curiosity to know in what manner farmers could advertise, he said:

"I live in one of the best counties in Michigan, where I own and till a large farm. In addition to growing all kinds of grain I raise both cattle and hogs. I live within convenient distance of four railroad stations, each having a number of grain buyers and stock dealers. When I conclude that I am ready to sell my stuff, I insert a local in three or four local papers published at those villages stating the amount and quality, and, if stock, when it will be ready to go. Then, instead of being compelled to go from one dealer to another in order to receive a fair price, they come to me, and by mail and personally put a price on it. The buyers know my methods, and also know that other dealers are after me, and as a consequence they bid the highest price they can afford. I always get the best prices going, and my little outlay in advertising pays me. Then another thing: If I want to buy a milk cow, what is the use of my riding all over the country, inquiring from Tom, Dick and Harry for the desired article, and spending from five dollars' worth of valuable time when fifty cents invested in an advertisement in the local paper will bring such a throng of eager sellers as to give my premises the appearance of a country fair ground?"

GRAVEL CURED.

(Philadelphia, Penn., item.)

A healthier, heartier, happier man than John J. Neill, of 2437 North Eighth street, Philadelphia, could not be found in a day's search. The fact that he is still alive is a constant wonder to his friends.

In the fall of 1889 he began to suffer indescribable miseries from stone in the bladder. Consulting an eminent physician in Philadelphia, he was told that a surgical operation was necessary. So much did he dread the result, for if unsuccessful it meant death, that he put off the evil day as long as possible. While in this frame of mind, he heard of

Although disheartened, on July 1, 1893, he bought a bottle of it, and within a month had experienced beneficial results, and before he had finished the third bottle, his gravel was completely dissolved and his sufferings at an end.

Mr. Neill feels that he owes a lasting debt of gratitude to Dr Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and for disorders of the bladder and urinary organs, says "it will effect a cure if one be possible."

Favorite Remedy is prescribed with unfailing success for rheumatism, dyspepsia and nerve troubles in which it has cured many that were considered beyond the aid of medicine. All druggists, $1.

KIDNEY TROUBLES.

Due To Many Causes, But Always with One Result, A Life of Agony Fraught with Horror, Death.

There are many people to-day who are unknowingly suffering from some severe kidney disease. This dreaded trouble should not be neglected. Swollen joints, pains in the small of the back, watery sacs under the eyes, a general bloating of the entire body, a loss of appetite, sleeplessness and nervousness are a few of the many symptoms that attend this awful affliction. The blood becomes filled with the germs of the disease and carries it to other parts of the body, so that when a patient suffering from this trouble dies, the entire body is found to be filled with disease cells. Do not hesitate or experiment if you are in this condition. You cannot begin too soon to look for help. Take at once that greatest and surest of cures, Kickapoo Indian Sagwa. Thousands attest its value for this trouble.

One of the many who testify to its curative powers is J. A. Kaiser, of Kewanee, Ill. He writes as follows: "I would say that I was almost down with my back, and consulted a splendid physician who said my left kidney was badly affected. I could hardly get up when I was sitting or lying down. I had taken the doctor's medicine, but it did me no good at all. I took Kickapoo Indian Sagwa and it cured me."

This same result is obtained in every instance. It cures always where a cure is possible. Above all, it is absolutely harmless, as it contains no poisonous ingredients of any description, being made entirely of roots, barks, herbs and gums of the Indians' own gathering. You can buy it at your druggists. $1.00 a bottle, 6 bottles for $5.00.

Come Sing to Me.

BY MRS. CORA M. W. GREENLEAF.

Come sing to me, darling,
Sing softly and low
A beautiful hymn
Of the long long ago,
When life wore a smile, dear,
For you and for me
Ere we felt its strong fetters
Or longed to be free.

When our hearts, dear, were beating
With beautiful hope,
And we knew not the anguish
Of sorrow's deep scope.
Then sing to me, loved one,
And dry up your tears,
And we'll live in the past
All the rest of our years.

Come sing me a dirge, dear,
Our hopes are all dead,
And long since were buried
'Neath days that are fled.
No more will we weep
Over what cannot be,
For oceans of tears
Like a bottomless sea

Cannot raise our dead hopes
From Fates, cruel tomb,
Cannot lift from our hearts
All this withering gloom.
Then give me your hand, love,
The daylight is passed,
And sing of the days, dear,
Too pleasant to last.

Norway in the Forties. No. 226.

Of Stephen Pingree an Immigrant of about 1800.

FIRST PAPER.

When the Norwegian travels to Boston in these latter days on the Eastern R. R. twenty-five miles this side (northerly) of that city, quite near the sea, he passes through the town of Ipswich, a pleasant village with several mills for manufacturies, and a fine harbor. The Indians called it Agawam, which is, I think, a pleasanter name to speak than the one given it by the inhabitants when it was incorporated by the "Great and General Court" in 1634.

Our story opens in 1641, seven years only after its incorporation, and two hundred and fifty-five years ago. The Puritans landed at Plymouth just twenty-one years before—and the first white inhabitant was living alone on the peninsular of Shawmut now Boston, only eleven years before.

On the date named (1641) an Englishman by the name of Moses Pingree (1) was a resident of Ipswich and in possession of the full priviliges and immunities of citizenship. It is not known when he came over, probably soon after the coming of the Mayflower. He was b. in England in 1583. He was quite an important man in the little town—was a selectman, also a deputy to the General Court, and, more important than all, as the people at that time thought, was a deacon of the church.

The very next year after we discover him in Ipswich, one Abigail Clement came into town (1642) from London, and soon thereafter they were married. She d. Jan'y 16, 1676—34 years after arriving in town.

The number of their children is not known here, only that they had a son b. in 1652, to whom they gave the name of Aaron (2) who m. Ann, daughter of John Pickard of Rowley, a neighboring town at the north-west. Moses Pingree (1) d. in Ipswich, Jan'y 2, 1669, at the age of eighty-six.

Aaron Pingree (2) moved to Rowley in 1696, (two hundred years ago) where he d. the next year (1697). His wife, Ann, lived a widow nineteen years, and d. Feb'y 20, 1716.

Job Pingree (3) son of Aaron (2) b. in Ipswich, Oct. 17, 1688, m. 1st Elizabeth Brocklebank, Nov. 1, 1717, when twenty-nine years of age. She d. Feb'y 12, 1747, after a married life of thirty years. He m. 2d Dorothy Doad of Topsfield, a town adjoining Ipswich on the south-west. She d. and he m. 3d widow Elizabeth Platts. He lived to the great age of ninety-six and a half years, dying April 25, 1785, one year only before the first settlers came into the wilderness of Norway.

Job Pingree's (3) first child b. Jan'y 12, 1719, one year and two months after his first marriage, received the name of Samuel Elliot (4). We shall see how this name, Samuel, has been perpetuated in the Norway family.

Samuel Eliot Pingree (4) son of Job (3) m. Elizabeth Carlton. He moved to Methuen, a town near the New Hampshire line, some fifteen miles a little north of west of Ipswich, where he lived, and where he d. in 1753, at the early age of 34 years.

The year before his decease a son come into his family (Aug. 7, 1752) who received the name of Stephen (5). When a few days over twenty-one, on Sept. 21, 1773, he m. Ruth Hoyt of the same town. This is the first appearance of the name of Hoyt in this family, but years afterward it became notable in northern Norway, and soon thereafter throughout the town as designating one of the most unique and original characters that ever had residence within our borders.

Stephen Pingree (5) remained in Methuen some years, several of his children were born there. He then moved some six miles due north to the town of Salem in the edge of New Hampshire, and from thence in 1785 about fifteen miles still further north to the town of Derry. The Norway History says he moved to New Salem and then to Derryfield. So far as I have been able to learn New Hampshire never had two towns with those names. He lived also a short time in the town of Manchester fifteen miles north-west from Derry.

His youngest boy William (6) was born in 1792, and two of William's boys, now grey-haired men, are living today in the village. They unite in declaring that they have often heard their father say that he was a small boy of some eight years when his father, Stephen (5) moved to Norway. I am satisfied he came here about 1800, possibly two years later. The Norway History says 1808, which would make William sixteen years old, and at that age could hardly be considered a small boy.

Some citizen of the town living, fifty or a hundred years from now, might wish to take a walk today, from the Methodist chapel in North West Norway, northward about two miles to the homestead of the Pingrees, and he might wish to call upon the good people living there in this January, 1896, and so, if the reader please, we will take a walk and leave a record for his information.

Just a few rods up from the Chapel Corner on the left is the pleasantly situated schoolhouse for that neighborhood. Just beyond is a carpenter shop, and across the street the beautiful white cottage of the owner, Charles A. Frost, the grandson of Joel, the immigrant, who settled in the wilderness by the side of Ward Noyes on the first ridge of land over to the eastward.

That schoolhouse was built some twenty years ago—the first one for that locality was put up about 1835 and stood at the four corners in the southwest angle. Previous to that time the scholars thereabouts travelled the long hard road to Swift's Corner, as far as two and a half miles for Wm. Pingree's children.

Fifty rods or so from the corner on the right we pass the little cemetery, called the "Chapel" cemetery, by others the "French," because it is situated in a French neighborhood.

Now we rise a sharp, rugged hill, and near the top, upon the left, above the road, among the apple trees, stands the house of Osgood French. His wife was a Pierce. They are both strong and well informed Second Adventists. You had best not open a discussion unless you are well up in the Bible and can quote it readily.

A few rods further on the right is the farm house of Amos French. He married a Dunn. They are also believers in the Second Coming of Christ to this earth.

Sixty or seventy rods further on the left is the old Samuel Lovejoy homestead. (Not mentioned in the Norway History.) This house stands on the very top of the ridge of land which the road follows in its northerly course. Harvey Knapp, the well-known temperance Reformer of Norway village in the seventies, now owns and occupies the farm.

Seventy rods or so from Knapp's is the William Pingree homestead. He was the son of immigrant Stephen.

Forty rods beyond, on the right, a little below the street, stands the old Silas Shedd house, fully described long ago. His son Calvin died there twenty years since. His widow occupies the house.

A fourth of a mile further on the left is where immigrant Elijah Flint settled in the wilderness. He married Dolly Baker Pingree, the immigrant's oldest girl. His boy, Samuel Flint, remained on the farm, and when the house became poor and old, he built new across the street, where his son Harlan lives to-day.

A third of a mile further is the old Benj. Peabody homestead. (His name is not in Norway History). Wm. H. Pingree lived there twenty-five years. He and his wife died there. Edwin Dunn occupies the place now.

Here the road swings further to the west, and in a third of a mile or so reaches the Wm. Pierce house. It is a large, fine residence and stands back from the street northerly some ten rods. His son William occupies it to-day.

Forty rods from Pierce's, on the right, just at the edge of a pretty woodland stands a house built by Wm. S. Pingree in 1855. Harry Greenleaf and his mother have lived there some fifteen years.

Twenty rods by the edge of the wood and on the left, just after starting to rise in the world, stands a schoolhouse and thirty rods further, all the way up, and the road passes a house standing on the right, it then makes a square turn to the right, leaving the house in the angle, and passes on towards the north, still rising, and soon reaches the top of the great hill, goes on over and down, and so away towards the White Mountains, into Albany, and beyond.

This house in the angle, where the road makes a square turn northerly, is the one we wished to find. When Stephen Pingree, the Norway immigrant, disappeared from Derry, N. H., about 1800, he appeared here with his family.

This old house of the immigrant, enclosed so securely in the square angle of the road, is now occupied by Charles Merrill, grandson of immigrant Edmund, who settled three-fourths of a mile away across the field westerly, on the Merrill hill road, in early times.

This old Pingree homestead is quite well up in the world, stands on a southerly incline, with an extensive view towards a warmer climate, and well protected northerly from the biting blasts and driving snows of the Oxford winters. It is nearly two miles from the Chapel where we began taking notes, and must be about nine miles from the village of Norway, in a northwesterly direction. The Albany line is a mile or more further towards the north pole.

These two miles of land over which we have come have been thickly settled since the beginning of the town. The fields are broken by hill and dale, many loose stones obstruct cultivation, and at many points the rocky foundations of the everlasting hills raise their heads to see the changes come.

A hundred years of life of toil and turmoil, of rest and neighborly content—of births, of marriages and of deaths as well—of the ploughing and sowing of these broken acres, of the harvesting, and the gathering into barns—a hundred years of gossip, of talk and discussion, of politics and religion! What a world history, what fancies and follies, what dramas of human life, what tragedies even have been enacted here!

This ridge of land has always been occupied by a stalwart, thoughtful, laborious people. Their living has come from mother earth, and she has never been over kind to her children. But a constant care and attention on their part, and a readiness to forgive her frowns and excuse her hard heart have kept her in a fairly mellow humor and she has yielded a fair living to the men of toil.

They have always been a reading and above all a thinking, conscientious people. Perhaps too radical at times in expressing their mind, forgetting that their thoughtful neighbor should be granted the same right they claimed, of holding and expressing political and religious views. This, however, has only shown to the world how thoroughly fixed and grounded they were in their opinions. No wind of false doctrine could blow them from their course, or send their ship upon the breakers.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had Consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching Consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in Coughs and Colds. Free trial bottles at Noyes Drug Store. "The People's Share of Guard Duty in Municipal Reform" was the subject of an address made by Mayor Pingree of Detroit, in Providence, R. I., recently. He was the guest of the Young Men's Business Association of that city. His record proves him abundantly qualified to speak on that subject.

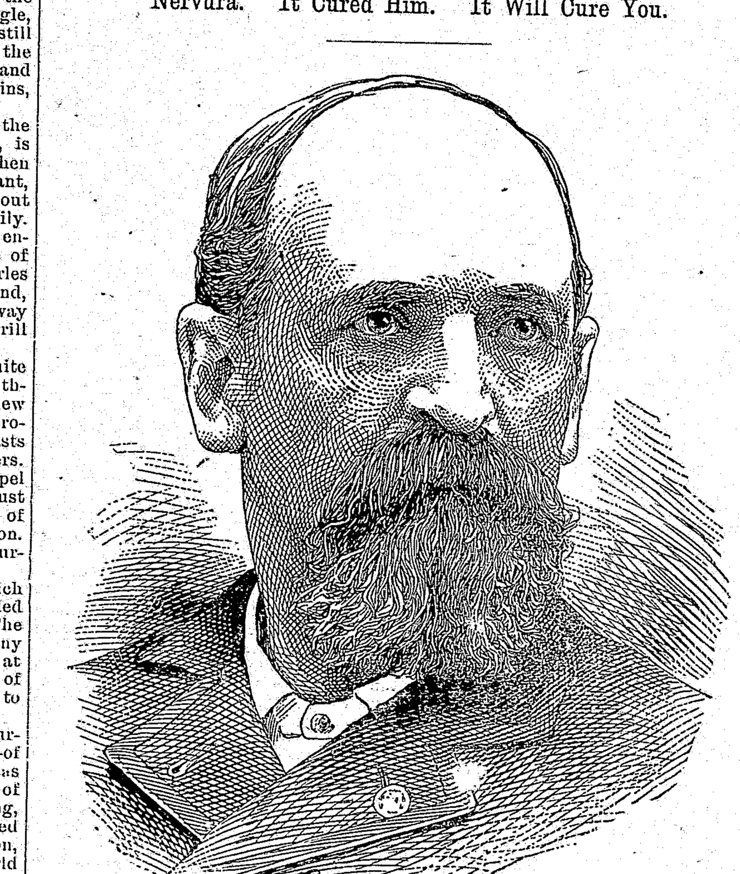
DR. GREENE'S NERVURA

Cured Gen. Buzzell, Department Commander of New Hampshire G. A. R.

The Famous Commander Writes to the People to Use Dr. Greene's Nervura. It Cured Him. It Will Cure You.



GEN. CHARLES E. BUZZELL.

Gen. Charles E. Buzzell, of Lakeport, N. H., Department Commander of New Hampshire G. A. R. has something of interest to say to the people in regard to the remarkble c rative powers of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Few men are more widely known than Gen. Buzzell, who is street commissioner of Lakeport, and the most prominent builder and contr ctor in the State. The General says:—

"I was terribly run down in health and as a result of overwork, became nervous, weak, tired and without my old-time energy and ambition. I grew so fearfully nervous that I could not rest nor sleep nights but would be obliged to get up and walk about several times each night. I would get tired and nervous so easily and quickly that it became almost impossible for me to attend to my business. At the same time I had most severe and distressing backache.

"I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and it helped me right away. My nerves were so strengthened and invigorated that the nervousness left me, and I could again sleep soundly nights, and wake mornings refreshed and feeling strong and vigorous. The backache is completely cured. I am now perfectly well and better able than ever to attend to my business. I have recommended this wonderful remedy to several others and it has cured them all. I urge people to use it because I know it will make them well."

Gen. Buzzell's case was like thousands of others.

People from overwork, strain upon brain and nerve or other cause, break down in health, feel that they are physically weak and that their nerve strength, energy and power are greatly diminished. Just so sure as night follows day will prostration and debility, the wreck of nerves, brain and body, follow if a cure is not immediately sought.

Neglect is the fatal thing. Never allow the first symptoms—the tired feeling, the weakened nerves, the loss of power or of endurance, the lack of snap and energy—to drift you into total loss of health. Take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy now, and it will cure you as it cured Gen. Buzzell, as it has cured thousands upon thousands of others. It is the great curer of disease, the great strengthener of nerves, the great builder up of blood, the great invigorator of brain and body. It will make you well. Do not class this most valuab e remedy with patent medicines. It is a physician's prescription, and its discoverer, Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., has the largest and most successful practise in the world in nervous and chronic diseases, and can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter.

Scribner's Magazine for February might be called a mid-winter outdoor number, as it contains an unusual number of articles of life and adventure in the open air. First among these is the leading article of the number on the Colorado Health Plateau, by Lewis Morris Iddings, which is a delightful social study by a man who has travelled in many regions of the world, and who knows the region around Colorado Springs thoroughly, having spent a number of winters there.

Sebastian S. Smith of Fore Street showed us a diary kept by his father. It is a neatly kept and well made volume. Some weather accounts are in there which show that this is not the first unusual winter that the inhabitants of Oxford County have witnessed. In 1837-8, we learn that the ground had not been covered till after Jan. 27; Feb. 3, the snow was deeper than before that winter, and then there was only five or six inches; March 24, Mr. Smith sowed early peas and plowed them in, and during the same day rolled in some grass seed. The spring of 1843 was differant; April 6 was Fast Day and nine pairs of cattle were put on the roads in that district to break them out after a snow fall of 12 to 16 inches; Apr. 29, drifts five feet deep were shoveled out to make a passage for the stage; rain came in torrents for two days, clearing off the great body of snow and making the greatest flood on record in this vicin-ity, May 1-2.

Did you ever stop to think what indigestion really means? It means simply that your stomach is tired. If our legs are tired, we ride. The horse and the steam engine do the work. Why not give your stomach a ride: that is, let something else do its work. Foods can be digested outside of the body. All plants contain digestive principles which will do this. The Shaker Digestive Cordial contains digestive principles and is a preparation designed to rest the stomach. The Shakers themselves have such unbounded confidence in it that they have placed 10 cent sample bottles on the market, and it is said that even so small a quantity proves beneficial in a vast majority of cases. All druggists keep it.

ANODYNE LINIMENT

It was invented in 1810 by an old fashioned, noble hearted Family Physician for the good of his fellow men, to allay pain and cure inflammation. For over 80 years the demand for it has steadily increased. It has stood on its own intrinsic merit while generation after generation has used it with entire satisfaction and transmitted the knowledge of its worth to their children as a valuable inheritance. It is the best, the oldest, the original. It is unlike any other. It is superior to any other. For Internal as much as External use. Trust what time has endorsed. It is used and endorsed by all athletes. Every Mother should have it in the house, dropped on sugar suffering children love it. It is the great muscle nervine. It produces an increase of vital activity in the system, and by its electric energy excites the parts to more vigorous exertion.

Having used Johnson's Anodyne Liniment on a friend who was suffering with lumbago, with good results, I recommend it to any one in need of a good Liniment.

Stephen Richardson.

Mr. Richardson had been confined to his room for several weeks, and there was no surprise when it was announced that he died during Saturday night.

He was born in Turner, July 24, 1810. The foundations of his future business success were laid while driving through eastern Maine on a tin peddler's cart, fifty to sixty years ago. His home was on a farm in Turner, till about thirty years ago, when he moved to South Paris and bought the tinsmith business of Albert G. Barbour. Mr. Richardson and his sons conducted the business for about a year in the place where Barbour had it (now the location of E. L. Parlin's harness shop) and then bought a building on the lower side of Market Square, which had been used for the manufacture of a patent portable oven. The business is still continued at that place, though in a very different building.

Mr. Barbour returned from a trip to California and bought a half interest in the business. When his partner died, Mr. Richardson transferred the business to his sons, Charles E. and J. Percival. The former sold out his share to Capt. Albion Hersey, who disposed of it to J. A. Kenney.

Charles E. Richardson at one time operated a branch business in Monmouth, for Richardson & Barbour. He went to Minneapolis and met an accidental death.

Mr. Richardson married Lucinda Bonney of his native town. She survives. They had three sons, all of whom grew to manhood. One was killed in the army, one died out West, and the third, J. Percival, is still following his father's line of trade, being senior partner of Richardson & Kenney.

Mr. Richardson was a successful business man and the hardware trade in South Paris flourished under his direction. His fellow citizens recognized his insight into financial matters and made him a trustee of South Paris Savings Bank, which position he held for fifteen years. He was a selectman of Turner, but never entered in active politics during his residence in Paris.

He was of a social disposition and did much to promote good will among his neighbors. He had many friends and no enemies. Since his death, the ADVERTISER man has frequently been told that a good citizen had been lost.

The funeral was at the house, Tuesday afternoon. Rev. Caroline E. Angell of Norway officiated, assisted by Rev. Thomas J. Ramsdell. Interment was in Riverside Cemetery. The business men of South Paris were present in a body, to pay the last respects to an influential and honorable man who had been one of themselves.

LOCKE'S MILLS.

The meetings being held here by the evangelists Nutter and wife of Lynn, Mass., are very well attended and quite an interest is manifested, several having manifested a desire to advance to a higher life; the meetings are to continue, this week. The Harper's Ferry Quartette will be here and sing their sacred songs, Wednesday and Thursday evenings at the union church, the present week.

Last Sunday evening, just as meeting closed, a cry of fire startled the citizens of this place one. Of the Mill Co. houses was discovered to be on fire on the inside. The chimney burned out at about sunset, but as there was snow on the roof of the house. There was no fear of the shingles taking fire. The family that had occupied the premises had their goods all packed up to be moved out on Monday. There was no family in the house. Some one knowing this saw a light and proceeded to investigate the cause and found the woodwork round the chimney all on fire. He gave the alarm and in a short time willing hands extinguished the fire. It had damaged the house about $200. The soot had burned and heated the chimney so the woodwork caught. Narrow escape from a large conflagration as the company's store and the dwelling that E. L. Tebbetts occupied was very near by and must be burned.

M. E. Cole has moved his family to Rumford Falls where he has a job in the railroad yard at that place.

Snow has come and every one is improving it.

Fred McAllister called on your correspondent, the other day. He was going home from Roxbury, where he has been at work in the woods. He says one company up there has twenty-three hundred cords of bolts in the woods, another has thirteen hundred and fifty cords. Quite a lot of lumber for the time of year.

SOUTH WATERFORD.

With the advent of a little snow, timber seems to move a little more readily, but there is still an insufficient quantity to make business lively in the woods.

W. W. Watson will not purchase timber, this winter, to be cut into salt box material as the use of bags for small quantities seriously interferes with the sale of small boxes. He will buy pine timber principally, this season.

A. G. Morse is delivering a large quantity of pine timber at the Mfg. Co.'s mill to be sawed to orders. It is taken from the lot he purchased of Geo. I. Kimball. There seems to be no doubt that "Gus" is a hustler.

Edw. C. Nelson of this place is at work for the Lovell Cycle Co. of South Portland, where he has an excellent position. His natural adaptability to the work will no doubt make him successful.

"Uncle Daniel" Lebroke attends to the wants of all comers with neatness and dispatch and gives universal satisfaction. He is one of the few, now a days, that knows how to make indian meal as of yore.

Camp-Fire at Norway.

R. Corps of Norway. Altogether some one hundred and thirty were entertained at the tables and there was no doubt of that part of the exercises being quite interesting and satisfactory. After the cloth had been cleared, the social part of the entertainment was taken up. No order of exercises had been prepared and the Adjutant of Harry Rust Post, in the absence of the Commander, assumed the position of master of ceremonies with the following result:

First, singing by the congregation led by Comrades Noble and Bartlett. Second, speaking by Adjutant Bolster of Kimball Post, followed by Commander Wood of Roberts Post, Past Dept. Commander, G. L. Beal of Harry Rust Post, and Quartermaster O. G. Curtis of Kimball Post.

Judge Davis had been invited by the ladies and was present and when called upon to speak, responded with some very appropriate and pleasing remarks.

Comrade Chase, a son of Solon, was then called and gave a very entertaining account of his record as a soldier, how it took him two years to get into the service and another two years to get out, coming out with the loss of both eyes. Comrade Chase held the close attention of the audience for a whole hour and then did not tell it all.

Gen. Beal exhibited a set of war scene pictures, which would make a very interesting subject of study.

Thus opened and closed the Camp-Fire at Norway.

The Universalist circle, last Friday evening, was a social and financial success. Supper was served to about eighty, that it was good goes without saying for circle suppers are always good. One hundred and sixty people enjoyed the entertainment. Mr. Morse made a hit in personating the exasperated wife of "a pesky jiner." Mr. Stone and Mrs. Swift as the deaf woman and tramp were fine.

George and A. B. Grover are now hauling their wood and lumber from their Peter Wheeler land, where we understand they are doing a thriving business.

Murd McPherson seems to be master of the situation in the position he holds. He works for A. S. Bean and has charge of several of the lumber yards. Recently one of the teamsters refused to load his team according to orders and was discharged and ordered to return to this village. McPherson took the team himself and came in on time with a good load. A good man for the situation.

We are pleased to note that there appears to be more than one young man who has furnished wood to the satisfaction of the old man for the purpose of the liberty to visit the daughter, for some of our village young men seem to be very inquisitive to know where the writer got the news as reported, last week, but we will say to them don't blush too much for it is not you intended but a young man from another town. But if you are guilty and it comes to light we will take you in later.

Julia Gilcrease visited her friend, Rosa Bean, one day last week.

Josiah Horr was in this village, last Saturday.

Our village school will close, next Friday. The teacher, Albert Eames, has proved himself a first-class teacher in all parts of his duties. This has been a very profitable term.

SOUTH CONWAY, N. H.

The long looked for snow came at last on the 24th and the 25th. There was about nine inches of it and the past week has been a very busy one with many. All who had wood or timber to haul have improved all of the time and some have been hauling hay. Saturday, the 1st of this month, another small snow storm only two or three inches of it. Sunday, Candlemas Day, was fair and bright with quite a high wind that kept the snow in motion most of the time.

George Foster and Ora Wakefield of Intervale, N. H., and their cousin, Mary Gale of Jackson, spent last Thursday in this place with Mr. and Mrs. Wakefield, Miss Ora's parents. Carroll Wakefield returned with them.

What

You want of a medicine is that it shall do you good—purify and enrich your blood, throw off that tired feeling, and give you health, strength, courage and ambition.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

is the only true blood purifier prominently in the public eye today, and it meets these requirements perfectly. This is proved by the testimony of thousands of people. Hood's

Sarsaparilla

Builds up the nerves by feeding them on pure blood, creates an appetite by toning the digestive organs, overcomes That Tired Feeling by giving vitality to the blood, and gives sweet refreshing sleep. You may realize that Hood's Sarsaparilla this by giving it a fair trial. Insist upon Hood's and only Hood's. $1; six for $5.

Does

Hood's Pills act harmoniously with Hood's Sarsaparilla. 25c.

EAST HEBRON.

Last Sabbath seemed like a winter's day, it being the day the snow was blown about by the wind.

Mrs. Almon Record passed away last Wednesday, after suffering intensely for several months with cancer in the stomach. Her three daughters were with her at the time, two of them arriving just in time to receive her dying blessing, and in a few minutes she was speechless. Her eldest son, Roscoe L. Record, of N. Y., was not present. Her sister, Clara Washburn, who lived here, and one brother, Augustus Washburn of Pa., are all that remain of the large family to which she belonged. She left two sons and three daughters, who deeply lament the loss of an affectionate mother, who always was ready to sacrifice her pleasure or comfort for her children, or any one she thought in need. The poor were always remembered by her and she will be sadly missed in this community. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. L. Bradeen on Saturday p. m. Her daughter, Mrs. Hattie Allen, left on the next train for home, her health being so poor she dared not remain. Mrs. Record arranged all business and spoke of the flowers she wished placed on her breast in her casket.

But few cases of measles appear of late.

Mrs. Mixer intends to return to her home in Paris, this week. Her health is poor and she is too feeble to have charge of the work when her sister, Mrs. C. F. McKenney, is confined in bed. Mrs. M. is thought to be improving for a few days past.

Mrs. Lillian Sawyer intends to go to Massachusetts in a few weeks to make a permanent visit.

Ice is in good condition to be gathered and is being sawed in large quantities.

Addison Monk intends to buy a farm for his boys the coming spring, as they like farming better than railroad work.

A little girl, who saw her first rabbit, ran home and told her mother she met out in the road something setting up about as big as Charlie's molly cat, with two ears and not a bit of a tail.

A CARD.

No chromos, silverware, furniture or books go forth from our store under the guise of presents, when they are in reality paid for in extra profit on the goods bought.

For instance, when you invest $10 in clothing we think you want $10 worth of goods, and not $9 worth of goods and a $1 premium.

We will guarantee that when you have purchased enough at our store to entitle you to a premium at other stores, you will have saved more than the amount of the premium twice over. A dollar saved is a dollar earned. Hence by trading with us you can increase your earnings.

We have always sold goods for as small profit as any store can and meet its obligations,—in fact lower than any store in Oxford County. This all shrewd buyers will bear witness to. If we were to give away premiums each year to the amount of $500 it would mean just that amount more of expense, and we would have to do as all the other stores that give away premiums do,—tack on more profit, and when you bought clothing you would pay for the premium.

: : REMEMBER : :

If you wish to pay for clothes and receive premiums go to some other store. If you wish to pay for clothes and receive clothes come to us.
